Discover Blind Fish In Cave In South Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., July 9.—Blind fish have been discovered in the southern part of Indiana by Prof. C. H. Elgenmann, head of the zoology department of Indiana university and internationally known authority on blind fishes. The find was made in underground rivers in caves that geologists declared to be from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 years old. Dr. Eisenmann said this gives some conception of the time required for the fish to pass from the ordinary variety with eyes to their present blindness.

The specimens were found in the Mitchell caves in Orange county. The female, according to the professor, convey the eggs into the gill cavity; thus she acts as an animated hatchery until the young are able to take care of themselves. The eyes of the young are said to develop in a perfectly normal way, but soon the eyes begin to lag behind the development, then they begin to deteriorate and in old age only small specks of black pigment shows where they should be.

Some Hens Showing Egg Capacity Prove To Be Poor Layers

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (University of Tennessee). July a.—Mrs. Florence Forbes. poultry specialist, division, of extension, says that she occasionally flids in the poultry flocks of the state head that show 200-ong capacity, appear perfectly healthy and go on the rest every day, but lay only a half dozen or more eggs during a season. Poultry owners and home demonstration agents often ask for an explanation of this, and to clear the matter up theroughly, Mrs. Forbes quotes T. E. Quisenberry, president of the American Poultry school, a recognized poultry expert, as follows:

"Cases where a hen shows a 200-egg capacity, appear to be perfectly healthy and going on the nest every day, but a laying few eggs, are quite frequent in many flocks. If you would kill such a hen and examine her, you would find something wrong with the egg organs. We had a hen in our egg laying context that measured up, well and had every indication of being a most excellent layer. This hen also went in on the nest daily, but she never layed a single egg. Upon examination of the hen after the contest was over we found that she had no ovaduct. This yolks would drop off into the body cavity and would be reabsorbed by the hen. This hen may have a rupture at some point in her ovaduct, or it may be slightly out of line so that the mouth of the ovaduct does not eath the yolks as they drop off. Maybe an occasional yolk will be caugath, but not a sufficient number of them so that the hen can as they drop off. Maybe an occasional yolk will be caught, but not a sufficient number of them so that the hen can manufacture any great number of eggs.

"This is simply a slip in the construction of the hen. While it may be due, as I said, to a rupture that has since healed up, but still prevents the hen from laying. That being true, it would have nothing whatever to do with the typs, or capacity of the hen, lier egg organs are not functioning because of some abnormal conditions. You might have an automobile standing out in the street. It would have every appearance of being an automobile, but if it had no battery or was lacking in valves, the automobile would not move eff, and would not perform as it should. If The same thing is true with this hen that, you have reference to, in my opinion."

WAS NEGLIGENT, CHARGE; DENTIST TO PAY $9,000

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 9. (By International News Service.)—A verdict of $5,090 was returned by the Jersey circuit court against Dr. Frederick W. Ziebell, dentist, who was charged with responsibility for the death of a patient, Mrs. Cornella Ollert.

It was claimed that Dr. Ziebell was using an electric drill on Mrs. Ollert June 13, 1916, when a heavy thunder shower broke, and the drill, affected by the electrical disturbance, transmitted an augmented current of electricity that burned Mrs. Ollert's mouth and gave her a shock from which it was contended lockjaw developed. She died two days later. It was alleged that Dr. Ziebell failed to have the wire which transmitted the power to the drill properly insulated. The doctor denied this.
